Promoting local education

RIPPLE Africa is involved with building school blocks, supplying books, paying teachers' salaries, and much more ...

Pre-schools — Supporting eight pre-schools

Charles, the pre-school coordinator — making learning fun! We pay the salaries of 25 pre-school teachers

We provide tea and sweet potato meals every day at the pre-schools. Additionally, local wood carvers make educational toys for the children

We have built classroom blocks, kitchens and toilets but the local community needs more

Primary schools — Contributing to five primary schools

We have built classroom blocks, and we help to maintain school buildings

We work with primary schools on tree planting projects and get students involved

RIPPLE Africa volunteers help at all of the primary schools

Philemon, one of the RIPPLE Africa trainee teachers. There is a shortage of fully trained government teachers

Secondary education — Built and support Kapanda + scholarship scheme

RIPPLE Africa has built Kapanda Community Day Secondary School and provides continued support

We build teachers' houses to attract and retain good teachers

We have provided text books to all classes. Many other schools have very few text books

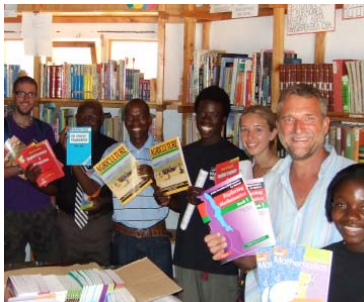

There is a school scholarship scheme based on merit to pay the fees of the selected students

Community library, adult literacy and supporting university students

We have built Mwaya Community Library and an adjoining reading room

There are about 4,000 books in the library, and it is very well maintained by the RIPPLE Africa library staff

We now support two local adult literacy groups and there is a need to expand this in the future

George was sponsored through university for four years and now has a job with accountants Deloitte Malawi
